Manager Kimball of Haleiwa is to give a moonlight dance at his popular hotel on Saturday night. These affairs are so enjoyable that local society is always represented at them.

Owing to conditions in town there has been no opportunity for social doings there for several months and judging from the number of reservations made up to date the affair on Saturday will be well attended.

The road is in good condition for motor-ing and many will return to town after the dance but as Haleiwa is delightful always, it is probable there will be a large number of guests remain over Sunday.

CHOLERA DID NOT SCARE ALL TOURISTS

In his report to the Promotion Committee this week, Secretary Wood today said:

"While the scare headlines in coast papers concerning our recent slight cholera epidemic unquestionably affected travel, yet it has not lessened interest in Hawaii as the following letter from Bellingham, Washington, would indicate.

"Will you please tell me if Honolulu is still under quarantine as I would like to go over there in the near future and see about buying some city property."

"The following letter from Warwickshire, England, is of interest: "Having read some of your folders in our library with a considerable amount of interest, I am writing to ask you for further information respecting Honolulu as to its suitability as a place of residence for an Englishman and his family. Please give cost of living, educational facilities, health conditions, etc."

BIG FIRE GIVES HILO TROUBLE

(Special Bulletin Correspondence.) HILO, April 3.—Last Friday evening a bit before eleven o'clock the town was startled by the largest fire which has occurred here for several years, though it was not a particularly big one at that, only a frame building, one story in height, being destroyed.

The house was situated back of the saw factory near mud land, near the canal and was inhabited by a Japanese carpenter, named Tado, but a Hawaiian had a small part of the house. The fire appears to have originated in the latter's kitchen. The Hawaiians in the neighborhood say that the Russian emerged in a great state of terror, when the fire started. He disappeared and was not seen during the rest of the evening.

A couple of police officers were the first outsiders to get on the scene to render assistance, and on the whole, the officers, particularly big Eddie Kamoku, did some really excellent work in extinguishing the fire and keeping it from spreading. The Hilo fire company, under Chief Johnson, and a bit later the new Waialua company, now for the first time in actual service, under Captain Peterson, each got a hose on the flames, but the men were hampered in their efforts at the start by a bad lack of apparatus, such as axes and other tools, and they were not able to save the house which was a total loss.
